KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ANNUAL BANQUET

Held In Oelze's Hall—Largest Attendance In History of the Lodge—Plenty of Music and Fine Menu

SHORT ADDRESSES MADE.

The annual banquet of the Knights of Pythias was given at Oelze's Hall Thursday night and it was worth living the whole year for an invitation. Everybody enjoyed themselves more than on any previous occasion. Prof. McCoy opened the evening's entertainment by calling for talks from the Rev. E. O. Cottrell and the Rev. W. C. Frank. They economized with their words and the guests were soon invited to the tables.

A menu of splendid soup, sandwiches, celery, pickles, ice cream and fruit was served in abundance. Just the left-overs would have satisfied many starving Belgians. To the members absent, baskets generously filled were sent and no one was forgotten.

The cakes, with which the wives and daughters of the Knights of Pythias are making a fine reputation, were there by the dozens again this year. They were delicious and covered with snow white icing.

During the entire evening the Cloverport orchestra furnished music, which was enjoyed by all. Miss Anna Edmondson and Mr. Owen Berry gave several music selections that have won the favor of the public ear.

A number of young men belong to the K. P. lodge and their active interest keeps up a large and faithful membership. The lodge does unbounded charity, supports orphan homes and its financial benefits is increasing its power and popularity throughout the United States.

BEAUTIFUL TEA

Given On Washington's Birthday In Compliment to the Baptist Missionary Society.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank English a beautiful tea was given in compliment to the Baptist Missionary Society Monday afternoon. The house was attractively decorated in accordance to the day. The large white columns at the porch entrance were wrapped in red, white and blue bunting. The parlors were aglow with flags, and fresh tulips and hyacinths gave a touch of spring to the appointments. Mr. Forrest Dryden Weatherholt and Miss Mary Owen Oelze, costumed, as George and Martha Washington, received more than one hundred and fifty guests, while Miss Elizabeth Skillman presided at the punch bowl. A delicious luncheon was served and the life of the Washingtons was the topic of entertainment. During the afternoon $25.60, in cash offerings, was received for the work of the Society. Those who assisted Mrs. English on the reception and entertainment committees were as follows: Mrs. Thos. Tousey, Mrs. S. P. Conrad, Mrs. Frank Mattingly, Mrs. Frank Payne, Mrs. Phillip Kramer, Mrs. Chas. Lightfoot, Mrs. J. Proctor Keith, Miss Stella Weatherholt, Mrs. Chas. Hamby and Mrs. Thos. Odewalt.

A Popular Convention.

Of all the conventions held in the State none attract more attention among educated and thinking people than the meeting of the Kentucky Educational Association, which this year meets in Louisville April 21st-24th.

The Secretary of the K. E. A. says that the program is the best ever. Every phase of school work is covered; departmental meetings are given great prominence in order that practical problems of teaching may get full discussion. Besides, speakers of prominence will address the meeting.

For this occasion the railroads will make a very low round trip rate with liberal return limits; therefore, all superintendents, teachers, and those interested in educational matters should make a special effort to attend the meeting of this year.

Information as to railroad fares, dates and limits, can be obtained from the nearest agent or

GOOD ROADS MEETING FRIDAY

Special Term of Fiscal Court at Hardinsburg For the Upbuilding of Good Roads.

MAY ASK FOR STATE AID.

The citizens of Breckenridge county, who are interested in good roads, and the improving and upbuilding of roads in Breckenridge county, are all cordially invited and urged to attend a special called term of the Fiscal Court at the court-house in Hardinsburg on Friday, February 26th.

At this meeting the advisability and feasibility of asking for State aid to the building of public roads in this county will be discussed and considered. The law and regulations and the conditions imposed on our Fiscal Court in order to secure and receive the benefits of State aid will be fully discussed and explained at this meeting.

As most every one knows, we are now required to pay an additional five cents on the one hundred dollars worth of taxable property for the purpose of creating a State road fund. Each county is entitled to secure its proportionate part of said fund, provided it can meet the conditions imposed by the law and the department. So come out and let us see if we cannot arrange to meet said conditions and receive the benefits that we are entitled to from this fund.

Respectfully yours,
D. D. DOWELL,
Judge Breckenridge County.

Announcement.

To the Republicans of Breckenridge County:

I am a candidate for Representative subject to the action of the Republican party in the August primary, 1915. If my principles in such an undertaking do not merit approval, I shall not be offended by repudiation. On the other hand, if you favor my views, which I believe you will, there is no human soul that could appreciate it more than I.

I favor the following:
(1) Anti-liquor laws. (2) Legislation retrospective as well as progressive. (3) Legislation for the masses rather than certain individuals. (4) A greater Kentucky. (5) Appropriate legislation to amend some of the defects in the present system of education. (6) A law providing for better roads with no advance in taxes, for I believe that if appropriations were carefully watched and fewer offices created that Kentucky could have better roads with the same tax rate. (7) Economy in appropriations, and (8) Justice in all measures.

Fellow Republicans and gentlemen who expect to affiliate with the party principles in the future, if you favor the foregoing statements, you favor a young man who was brought up among the hills and rocks of Breckenridge county, Kentucky, on the farm, who has felt the keen punch of the plow handles in his ribs, and one who thinks he knows the problems of the farm. For the last seven years I have been engaged in a work that is God's own-teaching. And I wish to thank the people of the district in which I have taught for the support given me while with them. I remain grateful for any favor from the people in the future.

Logan Hickerson,
Hardinsburg, R. No. 2, Feb. 22, 1915.

DID NOT OWN STOCK

Action Against J. B. Fritz is Dismissed by the Court in Louisville.

Id the case of Sarah K. Cunningham and about forty-five other depositors of the Two States Bank, of Stephensport, which failed in March, 1911, against J. B. Fritz and the Hardinsburg Bank and Trust Company, assignee for the Two States Bank, Judge Kirby yesterday dismissed the petition of the plaintiffs. It was charged by the plaintiffs that Fritz owned twenty shares of stock valued at $1,000 in the Two States Bank at the time it failed and that he was liable under the double liability act to depositors for the double amount of his stock. In his answer Fritz declared he sold his stock in the bank for $1,250 on January 2, 1911, two months before the failure of the bank, to John S. Adair, an executive official of the bank. It developed that Adair absconded about the time the bank failed and that he had failed to transfer Fritz's stock on the books, although the certificates were found. Judge Kirby held the transaction valid, and says that the fact that Fritz had $1,800 on deposit in the bank when it failed was sufficient evidence of his faith in Adair and the bank.—Louisville Herald.

Judge McKenzie Moss Candidate For Reelection.

Hardinsburg, Ky., Feb. 22.—(Special).—We notice by the papers that Judge McKenzie Moss, of Bowling Green, is a candidate for reelection as Circuit Judge in the 8th Judicial District. It seems certain that he will have no opposition on the part of the Republicans for the nomination and it is probable that he will have none on the part of the Democrats for reelection in November.

The bar and citizens of this county remember Judge Moss very kindly and favorably, as he held one term of court here as Special Judge, and rendered such general satisfaction to the bar and litigants and created such a favorable impression, that he is a general favorite in this county. His many friends here hope that he may be returned and re-elected without opposition, on his splendid record and will congratulate him and his district, if he should be. Judge Moss has frequently been mentioned as an available Republican candidate for Governor.

Not a Plow Must Be Idle.

President Wilson, in an address at the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Washington, D. C., urged the business men of the nation to find a way to co-operate so they attain their share of foreign trade. He said that not a plow must be idle if America is to feed the world as the shortage grows and that the land must yield more, and that the Government is ready to give scientific counsel. The trick that will do the work is forced plant feeding—cramming—making fertile soils still more fertile. It can be done at a big profit the first season.

We not only need more land under the plow—we need more intensive cultivating and fertilizing of that which is plowed.

IN MEMMORIAM.

A good woman was called home when the death angel entered the home of Mr. Wm. Dowell and took from him his aged and loved mother, a grand Christian woman passed beyond.

Mrs. Nancy Dowell was born in Breckenridge county, Ky., April 2, 1828. She died February 3, 1915, living to the ripe old age of 86 years and 6 months. She was converted when she was 17 years old and lived a consistent Christian until her death.

Although suffering for many years with bodily afflictions, her strong mind never seemed to weaken and she was, therefore, a bright and interesting conversationalist, ever advising and counseling those about her. She showed unbounded patience and fortitude during all her affliction, and was often heard to say, "God is not going to make me suffer. I am only waiting for the Master to call me home." Mrs. Dowell was a daily Bible reader as long as she had strength to read. She was a woman of unbounded industry and energy. She was a good neighbor, and was ever ready to lend a helping hand in a time of need.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Harvey English at the Sample church, and the burial was in the Sample graveyard by the side of her husband, who passed away several years ago.

Besides a host of friends and relatives, she leaves three daughters and one son to mourn her death. They are: Wm. Dowell, Union Star, Ky.; Mrs. R. L. Basham, Sunnyside, Kans.; Mrs. Leon Atkinson, Dives, Kans.; Mrs. G. W. Payne, Stephensport, Ky.

At the time of her death, Mrs. Dowell was a member of the New Bethel Baptist church.

We who loved her do not grieve for her as having no hope, for we too well know that her peace is sure. Blessed are they that die in the Lord. "Yea the Lord sitteth, as King forever; the Lord will give strength to his people; the Lord will bless His people with peace."

MISSION CONFERENCE FRIDAY, MARCH 26

Breckenridge Association Missionary Conference—Cloverport Baptist Church Friday, March 26—Dr. Cree, of Atlanta Coming.

FINE WORKERS TO COME.

An Association to Association campaign is now on in Kentucky co-operated by the State, Home, and Foreign Mission Boards. It began February 3 and will continue until April 3, giving one day to an Association. A similar meeting was held last year at Irvington, which was well attended and from which much good resulted. The conference will be held Friday, March 26, beginning at 11 o'clock and continue through the afternoon. The Cloverport church will be glad to entertain all who will come and are anxious to make the meeting a success and have every church, Sunday school and Woman's Missionary Society represented.

It is expected that each pastor, each member of the Mission Board, each Sunday school superintendent or other representative, and a representative from each W. M. U., including the Association officers, will be present. The W. M. U. conference will be held in the primary room, beginning at 2 o'clock, and will be in charge of Mrs. Kate Coleman Hinkle, the Corresponding secretary of Kentucky. The representatives of the Sunday schools and churches will meet in the main assembly room at 11 and continue through the day.

The leaders of this conference will be Dr. Cree, Enlistment Secretary of the Home Mission Board, Atlanta, Ga.; Rev. O. J. Cole, Enlistment Worker for Kentucky, and Rev. J. H. Benson, a returned missionary. Some of the topics to be considered are: Missionary Day in the Sunday School, Church to Church Campaign, Bible Plan of Church Finance, Enlistment Work, as Combining churches, building parsonages, locating resident pastors, and related matters will be discussed by the representatives of the churches.

Of course this conference can not take any action that shall be binding upon any local church, but these problems can be discussed. If there was a resident pastor at Irvington, Hardinsburg and Glen Dean, it would greatly strengthen the work of the Association. Let the churches take notice and those indicated in the call make their plans to come.

Capt. Ford Dead.

Captain Salem H. Ford died Friday morning in Owensboro at the home of his son-in-law, Urey Woodson. He was past seventy-nine years of age.

Captain Ford's wife died in 1889. His living children are: Mrs. J. D. Kennady, of Chicago; Arthur Y. Ford, of Louisville; Mrs. Urey Woodson, of Owensboro, and Mrs. Stewart Starling, of Henderson. All of them, except Mrs. Kennady, were with him when he died.

Homes Wanted For Little Citizens at Once.

Two hundred and thirteen children, ranging in ages from a month to sixteen years, are waiting at the Kentucky Children's Home for some one to love and care for them.

Out in the State are a great many more children waiting to come to our Receiving Home. So by taking a child from us into your family, you are doing a double kindness—a kindness to the child you take into your own family, to love and to be loved in return, and a kindness to the little unfortunates, without a home, waiting to come to us.

If you are interested in the children of our State, kindly write to the Kentucky Children's Home Society, 106 Baxter Ave., Louisville, Ky., and the superintendent will be more than glad to take the matter up with you."

Mrs. Nicholas Ill.

Mrs. Robert Nicholas, who is very ill at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tony S. Nicholas, does not improve and is still under the care of Mrs. Emery. She has been confined to her bed for several weeks and everything possible is being done to make her last days sweet and comfortable.

TRAINING FOR LONGEVITY.

The Mental Attitude is as Important as Bodily Vigor.

A few years ago a young man "died of old age" in a New York hospital. After an autopsy the surgeons said that while the youth was in reality only twenty-three years old he was internally eighty.

It is the aged mind that frequently makes the body old. "Keep growing or die" is nature's motto, a motto written all over everything in the universe. There must be a constant activity in the mind that would not age, and the body is but the expression of the mind.

There is no doubt that as a race we shorten our lives very materially through our false thinking, our bad living and our old age convictions. Dr. Metchnikoff of the Pasteur Institute in Paris says that men should live at least 120 years. Yet it is only in rare instances today that a man reaches even the century mark.

Making a business of prolonging life and still retaining as much as possible of its vigor, freshness and buoyancy ought to be a prime object, especially after one has passed fifty. While proper care of the body is absolutely essential for the attainment of this object, the mental influence far transcends all others. The attitude of the mind has everything to do with hastening or retarding the degenerative processes incident to one's declining years. It is an established fact that the body follows the thought, is shaped by the mental convictions, emotions, moods.—Orison Swett Marden in Nautilus.

TOBACCO GROWERS WANTED MARCH 2

At the Tobacco Growers Meeting at Lexington--Farmers Should Meet Here and Elect Delegates.

IMPORTANT MEETING SURE.

Edward Oglesby has asked The Breckenridge News to call attention to the Growers meeting at Lexington March 2. Mr. Oglesby says the farmers of this community should come to Cloverport Saturday and elect a delegate to the meeting.

Lucien Beckner, secretary of the growers organization, makes the following call to the farmers:

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 19, 1915.
To the Tobacco Grower:

Are you ready in your county for the March 2nd meeting in Lexington? Have you picked your best men for delegates? If not, get busy; the time is short and the occasion important. If we can not organize, it means that we must stop growing tobacco or give some one else all the profits.

Twenty-odd of the forty counties in the district are organized!

The plan to be adopted must be so simple that everyone can understand the business. The law will not permit of pooling and commingling. The identity of every crop will have to be maintained, so that a grower can look at his crop and know how it graded and sold, and how he should be settled with. These are conditions that the law compels. Can you be afraid of a plan that is bound by these conditions?

Articles of incorporation have been prepared for you to discuss and amend if need be at the Lexington meeting. The plan proposed is an eye-opener which no man can afford to miss hearing if he proposes to raise an acre of tobacco. It has succeeded everywhere else it has been tried. The only weak place in it is our unity. If we are together, we win; if not, we lose. The fellow or county that stays out is a trust helper; the fellow and county that comes in is a tobacco grower's friend. Which are you? Yours for the Cause,
Lucien Beckner,
Secretary of the Growers' Organization.

Don't Endanger it With Calomel.

It is generally agreed by experts in this country and Europe that calomel has a very violent effect on the system. This accounts for the familiar disagreeable feeling accompanying a dose, and the weakened condition following it.

LIV-VER-LAX is a harmless vegetable compound, that is a mild but effective substitute for calomel. It has all the effectiveness, but not the effect, of calomel. Its splendid value has brought it into such wide use that in some states it has almost entirely replaced calomel.

Just try LIV-VER-LAX once, and you'll never use calomel again. Insist on the genuine, bearing the likeness and signature of L. K. Grigsby, which is guaranteed to give satisfaction or money refunded. For sale by Kinchee's Pharmacy.

GINKS CHEER JUDGE GARY, STEEL MAGNATE

Bows and Smiles at Hoboes at Hotel De Gink

New York (Special): A monogrammed limousine stopped at Center and Worth streets, a fur-coated footman swung back the door, and Judge E. H. Gary, executive head of the billion dollar steel corporation, stepped forth and climbed the winding staircase that leads to the office of the Hotel De Gink. This was Judge Gary's final stopping place after a five-hour tour of the places the city has provided for the unemployed to earn 10 cents an hour, for five hours a day.

"This is Judge Gary," Jeff Davis told the ginks present. "The judge and I have visited one another, and now he has come to see you."

The man from 17 Broadway smiled and bowed to the line-up.

"I am very glad to be a guest at the Hotel De Gink," he told them. "I am pleased that you appreciate what has been done for you, little as it is. I would not like to have anyone feel that this world offers no opportunity for them."

He urged them to make this a start in life for them. The guests gave him three cheers, and he shook hands with Jeff, and was whirled off to the offices of the steel corporation.

Recognized Advantages.

You will find that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has recognized advantages over most medicines in use for coughs and colds. It does not suppress a cough but loosens and relieves it. It aids expectoration and opens the secretions, which enables the system to throw off a cold. It counteracts any tendency of a cold to result in pneumonia. It contains no opium or other narcotic, and may be given a child as confidently as to an adult. For sale by all dealers.

STRATEGY IN WAR

Retreats to Lure the Enemy From His Base of Supplies.

KNOWN AS FABIAN TACTICS.

Methods That Have Been Used by Warriors Since Long Before the Christian Era--George Washington Was Called the American Fabius.

After the great war in Europe had broken loose in the summer of 1914 and the allies fell back from their first line in northern France to the Marne a good deal was said and written of "Fabian tactics," and when the Germans fell back from the line of the Marne to the Aisne more was said of "Fabian tactics." In this country when Washington and the heroic Continental army fell back before the English in superior force and of superior equipment and perhaps superior discipline, his tactics were called "Fabian." In fact General George Washington was called and by historical writers is still referred to as "the American Fabius." It is probably true that many Americans long parted from their school books have forgotten about Fabius, even though whenever an army makes an orderly retreat for the purpose of gaining time or reaching a more favorable position they speak fluently of "Fabian tactics." It is a phrase that comes trippingly off the tongue.

Fabius, as might easily be guessed from his name, was a Roman. He commanded the legions of Rome against the powers of Carthage 200 years before the Christian era. The tactics which came to be called after Fabius were no doubt employed centuries before Rome was born. Fabian tactics without doubt have been used ever since bodies of men made war, but it may be that Fabius so refined or systematized those tactics that it is just and worthy they bear his name.

Fabius in 217 B. C. stood opposite to the hosts or hordes of Carthaginians under the brilliant leadership of Hannibal. In battle before Fabius Maximus was called to the supreme command of the Roman troops in the field the Carthaginians had been victorious. Fabius, profiting by what had befallen his predecessors in command, avoided a pitched battle in the open and retreated, fighting as he fell back, holding off the enemy with what are now described as rear guard actions. Drawing the enemy farther and farther from base or the sources of supplies, wearying their troops more than he wearied his own and delaying a battle until he reached ground where his position would give him a great advantage--a position against superior numbers--where the loss in men and morale of the assailants must be great and where at the proper moment the counterstroke could be delivered with high promise of success, the tactics of Fabius won.

In some ways the phrase "Fabian tactics" has been diverted from its original and proper significance and is made to comprehend any tactics of

NOT, I THINK SO—I AM SURE.

William Berol, "the man with the marvelous memory," is instructing in Brooklyn 5,000 students to think. When they have completed a course in the Berol system, no more will the 5,000 say, I think so, I guess so, I am almost sure, and all other expressions of uncertainty will be dropped from daily use. Be certain or say nothing. Berol's teaching shows that one should never try to remember anything he can reason out. Do not develop the memory, but develop the brain and remember with your reason, your ability to compare and contrast, to weigh, to judge and to understand. The definition of memory given by a lad was the thing which you forget with. By cultivating your mind with remembering interesting facts and stories you can forget your disappointments, the mistakes and faults of others. How useful is the aged man, who remembers dates and facts of importance. How pleasant is the person who remembers the humorous side of experiences. How dependable is the young person who can trust his memory. A man who is proud of being almost seventy remembers only one hymn, but that is his great pleasure. Whenever his worries keep him from sleep, to himself he repeats that one song until he is lost in perfect slumber.

WHAT IS BEHIND HIS EYES.

In a recent address in Washington President Wilson had the following helpful words to say about performance, contracts and promises that come up in the daily experiences of men:

"We do not judge a merchant by his written contract. We judge him by his character; that is the best guarantee of that contract, and we do not willingly enter into contractual relations with him unless we have got the moral bond that we know exists in his integrity. After all, your final test is a spiritual test, whether you want to use that handsome word or not. You are judging the spirit of the man, what is behind his eyes, what is implied in his words, what is illustrated in his conduct.

"I have long ago received with amiability, I hope, the professions of all sorts and conditions of men, but after I have heard their professions I wait patiently to see their performance and I do not pass my judgment until that performance."

MONEY IN ROSE SLIPS.

Everybody who loves and grows roses will be interested to know there is money in rose slips. At Lewisport there lives a woman who makes a comfortable living, selling rose slips and rose bushes. She finds health, profit and lovely friends in her occupation; work in the open air produces the first and work, untiringly, brings the other assets. Growing flowers to sell or give away is compensating. It is not early now to plan the rose garden for this spring and summer. Many planted sweet-peas last week and there is promise of an abundance of flowers for Cloverport this coming season. Hyacinths and tulips are being cultivated for early spring, and some special plants are being re-potted for Easter offerings.

MRS. CONRAD WORTH A MILLION.

The only woman ever elected president of a live-stock association is Mrs. Jennie M. Conrad, of Conrad, Ind. She has recently been made president of the American Spotted Poland China Record Association. This efficient farm woman is the owner and operator of 5,000 acres of fine farm land in Northern Indiana and is reported to be worth a million. There are several women of the agricultural calling in Breckenridge county who have been very successful in live-stock. Perhaps the attainments of Mrs. Conrad will encourage them.

Cherries and little hatchets were worn in honor of the birthday anniversary of George Washington. Many beautiful flags were hung out the windows and on the porches of patriotic citizens. The post office and banks were closed and Cloverport expressed, in a general way, tribute to the Father of Our Country.

Lecture On The War By Irvin S. Cobb In Louisville

Many tickets of fifty cents, one dollar and a dollar-fifty sold successfully in Louisville Wednesday to those who went with sympathetic hearts and interested minds to hear the lecture on the war by Irvin S. Cobb at Macaulay's theater that afternoon and night. Mr. Cobb was in the war zone early last fall for the Saturday Evening Post. He talks like he writes and looks like his picture.

One may wonder what humor could be seen in a war, how people could laugh at a lecture on the destruction of human life and valuable property for the loss of both breaks the chord of happiness. There is no funny side to this war, yet Mr. Cobb kept away many tears by immediate humorous remarks. He tells nothing about the Germans to bring laughter, nothing amusing of the French, not a smiling thought of the Belgians was expressed. All his memories were those of horror, distress, ridiculous effort and waste to fight and win battles for what? He had to pick up his fun under the stars and stripes. He came back home for glimpses of humor to punctuate his lecture. He told his own funny personal experiences and some of the funniest negro stories ever brought from the south.

Brings Back Message.

Aside from the mercenary attractions which he acknowledged as he happily thought of the crowd that fell in line at the ticket office, Mr. Cobb feels his duty is to tell the message he brought home from the war. The substance of it is his firm belief that the United States should be better prepared for war and should have military training in the public schools. There are many who agreed with Mr. Cobb and have before advanced the same thought in regard to Uncle Sam's military equipment. But there are a few who believe that the more a nation prepares for war the closer the people get to it.

No Hatred in the Battlefields.

While the cities of the war zone look as if many million gallons of gasoline had been poured over them and followed by hay-stacks of flaming matches, there is no hatred in the battlefields. The men who are firing tremendous guns of war are not doing it with hatred. They operate them as men fire an engine and chop wood. The enemy is never seen in many battlefields. Huge guns are fired with no aim, the bullets and cannons are fired to hit where they will. A soldier said to Mr. Cobb, "How can I hate a man I have never seen and whom I may never expect to see?" The burning of homes and crops are lighted as one would light a lamp in the day time without need or cause. Mr. Cobb made it very implicit that not one hundredth of the stories of brutality sent to the newspapers were true. While men lie dead by the millions, soldiers suffering by the thousands, women are homeless and children starving, there is no contempt and willful meanness among the warriors themselves. They are kind to each other even in war.

At the Hospitals.

The sisters, the nuns and the women of France are caring for the soldiers.

PRISONERS OF WAR.

Code of Honor by Which Their Treatment is Governed.

In ancient times prisoners of war were killed unless, of course, the belligerents found it more profitable to exchange or liberate them for ransom. But today nations are bound to one another by a code of honor which forbids inhuman treatment of prisoners.

Prisoners are subjected to no punishment in any form. Neither must they be placed in a convict prison, although they may be detained in a fortress, camp or town. A reasonable supply of nourishment must be provided them by their captors, and they are regarded as being in the power of the government of the captor and not under the control of those who actually capture them.

All personal belongings remain in the custody of the prisoner, but arms, horses and military papers can be confiscated, these constituting booty.

Governments can put their prisoners of war to work, but only such work as accords with the prisoner's rank and capacity; also the work must not be excessive or relate to military matters, and in all cases must the labor be paid for.

A prisoner always lives in hope of being exchanged for a prisoner of his own government. The exchange is effected in accordance with agreements. In which time, place and method of exchange are fully detailed. This is generally that of strict equivalents, man for man, rank for rank, disability for disability.

An officer can obtain a greater freedom of movement or certain privileges while being a prisoner of war if he makes out a parole, a written or verbal promise. An officer giving his parole pledges his honor to refrain from a particular course of conduct, and if he makes a breach of this guarantee he is liable to the extreme penalty.—Pearson's Weekly.

Mr. Cobb described a depot which had been turned into a hospital. The roof had been blown off, but the doctors and nurses worked on between the walls with no protection over head. At night Mr. Cobb saw them, these patient servants of the injured, lie down and fall asleep on straw soaked with blood from the wounds of thousands of soldiers brought there daily. A little Frenchman lost both limbs to his knees and when he was coming from the anesthetic the doctor leaned over to comfort him, but he was a soldier at heart and held up his hands. "Oh, it could have been worse," he mumbled. "I am a tailor."

The wounded in the English hospitals are cared for by princesses, countesses and "countesses eventually," said Mr. Cobb. Flowers, luxury and kindness are almost killing the soldier patients there. Mr. Cobb spoke of a rich young English woman who inquired affectionally of her patient, "How are you now?" The soldier, lying on a snow white bed among roses, answered: "I am sorry to say I think there will be no hopes of my getting well unless you quit washing my face, you have washed it five times today."

The Marvelous Equipment.

Mr. Cobb told of the marvelous war equipment. Only a writer for the Scientific American could describe this war machinery. In the moving pictures, given with Mr. Cobb's lecture, the war trains were shown which carried in a wonderful way the fire arms. Mr. Cobb did not speak of the war as it is at sea, neither did the films show pictures of the war vessels.

Looked to America.

At Louvain, Belgium, Mr. Cobb visited a monastery. The two priests who greeted him were grief stricken over the ravages of the war. In the greatest faith they asked if America would not come to aid little Belgium. "Yours is a kind, good country, cannot you help us? Our people have always lived plain, peaceful lives. They work all day and their evenings and nights are spent at home." The war correspondent could give them no answer, having no authority to speak for his country in this way.

Later when Mr. Cobb returned and, passing through Louvain, all he could see of the monastery were its ashes. The priests, who had pleaded for their people, had been driven by flames from the place they loved so well.

Will Not Return.

Mr. Cobb concluded his talk on the war by answering questions which many in the audience asked with eagerness. All tried to speak at once, but a fellow up in the gallery called out in a loud voice: "Mr. Cobb, do you think you will go back to the war?"

"Not as long as Mrs. Cobb expresses her dislike in that direction," he answered quickly. "I am too much like an old darkey who took his bride to the country to live. Within three days the bride-groom was seen coming back with a load of furniture. 'Nigger, what's you moving her in this here town for,' asked his friend of color. 'Well, I tells you. Me hasn't been married but three days, but me has learned what me wife don't like, I just naturally hates.'"

Dome of the Rock.

The name "Dome of the Rock" is one that has been conferred on the celebrated mosque of Omar, at Jerusalem. It stands on Mount Moriah on the site once occupied by the temple of Solomon. Immediately under its dome an irregular shaped rock projects above the pavement. This rock was the scene of many Scriptural events and has been greatly revered for ages by Jews and Mohammedans.

Gardens and Dairies May Be Many Here Some Day.

Dear Mr. Babbage: Please find enclosed one dollar for a year's subscription to The Breckenridge News. I am sorry to have been so late in renewing it. I get the paper Friday morning and I certainly look for its coming.

I left Breckenridge county November 3, 1914, and came to Elm Grove to superintend the farm and dairy for the Manual Training School. I have had great success so far and like the work. It is a beautiful place, situated on Wheeling creek, one mile from Elm Grove, and five miles from Wheeling.

I read with much interest the tobacco news in your paper. Up here you do not hear any thing about tobacco; it is all dairy and garden news. In place of tobacco wagons you hear the rumble of dairy and garden wagons.

I will close by wishing you and the people in Breckenridge prosperity for the year 1915.

Yours respectfully,
ERNEST MCGARY,

CHAPTER X.

The Past a Blank.

It was perfectly true that Florence had cast herself into the sea. It had not been an act of despair, however. On the contrary, hope and courage had prompted her to leap. The night was clear, with only a moderate sea running. At the time the great ship was passing the banks, and almost within hail she saw a fishing schooner riding gracefully at anchor. She quite readily believed that if she remained on board the George Washington she was lost. She naturally forgot the marvel of wireless telegraphy. No longer may a man hide at sea.

So, with that quick thought which was a part of her inheritance, she seized the life buoy, climbed the rail and leaped far out. As the great, dark, tossing sea swooped up to meet her she noted a block of wood bobbing up and down. She tried to avoid it, but could not, and struck it head on. Despite the blow and the shock of the chill water she instinctively clung to the buoy. The wash from the mighty propellers tossed her about, hither and yon, from one swirl to another, like a chip of wood. Then everything grew blank.

Fortunately for her the master of the fishing schooner was at the time standing on his quarterdeck by the wheel, squinting through his glass at the liner and envying the ease and comfort of those on board her. The mate, sitting on the steps and smoking his turning pipe, saw the master lean forward suddenly, lower the glass, then raise it again.

"Lord a'mighty!"

"What's the matter, cap'n?"

"Jake, in God's name, come 'ere an' take a peek through this glass. I'm dreamin'!"

The mate jumped and took the glass. "Where away, sir?"

"A pint off th' sta'board bow. See somethin' white bobbin' up?"

"Yessir! Looks like some one dropped a bolster 'r a pillar overboard. . . . Cod's whiskers!" he broke off.

"Then I ain't really seein' things," cried the master. "Hi, y' lubbers!" he yelled to the crew; "lower th' dory. They's a woman in th' water out there. I seen her leap th' rail. Look alive! Sharp's th' word! Mate, you go 'long."

The crew dropped their tasks and sprang for the davits, and the starboard dory was lowered in shipshape style.

It takes a good bit of seamanship to haul a body out of the sea, into a dancing bobtailed dory, when one moment it is climbing frantically heavenward and the next heading for the bottomless pit. They were very tender with her. They laid her out in the bottom of the boat, with the life buoy as a pillow, and pulled energetically for the schooner. She was alive, because she breathed; but she did not stir so much as an eyelid. It was a stiff bit of work, too, to land her aboard without adding to her injuries. The master ordered the men to put her in his own bunk, where he nearly strangled her by forcing raw brandy down her throat.

"Well, she's alive, anyhow."

When Florence finally opened her eyes the gray of dawn lay on the sea, dotted here and there by the schooners of the fleet, which seemed to be hanging in midair, as at the moment there was visible to the eye no horizon.

"Don't seem t' recognize nothin'."

"Mebbe she's got a fever," suggested the mate, rubbing his bristly chin.

"Fever nothin'! Not after bein' in th' water half an hour. Mebbe she hit one o' them wooden floats we left. Them dinged liners keep on crowdin' us," growled Barnes, with a fisherman's hate for the floating hotels. "Went by without a toot. See 'er, jes' like th' banker's wife goin' t' church on Sunday? A mile a minute; fog or no fog, it's all the same t' them. They run us down an' never stop. What th' tarnation we goin' to do? She'll haff t' stay aboard till th' run is over. I can't afford t' yank up my mudhook this time o' day."

"Guess she can stand three 'r four days in our company, smellin' oil-cloths, fish, kerosene, an' punk t'bacco."

"If y' don't like th' kind o' t'bacco I buy buy your own. I ain't objectin' none."

The mate stepped over to the bunk and gingerly ran his hand over the girl's head. "Cod's whiskers, cap'n, they's a bump as big's a cork on th' back o' her head! She's struck one o' them floats'all right. Where's th' arnica?"

Barnes turned to his locker and rummaged about, finally producing an ancient bottle and some passably clean cloth used frequently for bandages. Sometimes a man grew careless with his knife or got in the way of a pulley block. With blundering kindness the two men bound up the girl's head, and then went about their duties.

For three days Florence evinced not the slightest inclination to leave the bunk. She lay on her back either asleep or with her eyes staring at the beams above her head. She ate just enough to keep her alive; and the strong black coffee did nothing more than to make her wakeful. No one knew what the matter was. There was the bump, now diminished; but that it should leave her in this comatose state vastly puzzled the men. The truth is she had suffered a slight concussion of the brain, and this, atop of all the worry she had had for the last few weeks, was sufficient to cause this blankness of the mind.

The final cod was cleaned and packed away in salt, the mudhook raised, and the schooner Betty set her sails for the southwest. Barnes realized that to save the girl she must have a doctor who knew his business. Mrs. Barnes would know how to care for the girl, once she knew what the trouble was. There would be some news in the papers. A young and beautiful woman did not jump from a big Atlantic liner without the newspapers getting hold of the facts.

A fair wind carried the Betty into her haven, and shortly after Florence was sleeping peacefully in a feather bed, ancient, it is true, but none the less soft and inviting. In all this time she had not spoken a single word.

"The poor young thing!" murmured the motherly Mrs. Barnes. "What beautiful hair! O, John, I wish you would give up the sea. I hate it. It is terrible. I am always watching you in my mind's eye, in calm weather, in storms. Pieces of wrecks come ashore, and I always wonder over the death and terror back of them."

"Don't y' worry none about me Betty. I never take no chances. Now I'm goin' int' th' village an' bring back th' sawbones. He'll tell us what t' do."

The village doctor shook his grizzled head gravely.

"She's been hurt and shocked at the same time. It will be many days before she comes around to herself. Just let her do as she pleases. Only keep an eye on her so that she doesn't wander off and get lost. I'll watch the newspapers and if I come across anything which bears upon the case I'll notify you."

But he searched the newspapers in vain, for the simple fact that he did not think to glance over the old ones.

The village took a good deal of interest in the affair. They gossiped about it and strolled out to the Barnes' cottage to satisfy their curiosity. One thing was certain to their simple minds: some day Barnes would get a great sum of money for his kindness. They had read about such things in the family story paper. She was a rich man's daughter; the ring on the unknown's finger would have fitted out a fleet.

Florence was soon able to walk about. Ordinary conversation she seemed to understand; but whenever the past was broached she would shake her head with frowning eyes. Her main diversion consisted of sitting on the sand dunes and gazing out at sea.

One day a stranger came to town. He said he represented a life insurance company and was up here from Boston to take a little vacation. He sat on the hotel porch that evening, surrounded by an admiring audience. The stranger had been all over the world, so it seemed. He spoke familiarly of St. Petersburg, Vladivostok, Shanghai, as the villagers—some of them—might have spoken of Boston. There were one or two old timers among the audience. They had been to all these parts. The stranger knew what he was talking about. After telling of his many voyages he asked if there was a good bathing beach nearby. He was told that he would find the most suitable spot near Captain

Barnes' cottage just outside the village.

"An' say, Mister, seen anythin' in th' papers about a missin' young woman?" asked some one.

"Missin' young woman? What's that?"

The man told the story of Florence's leap into the sea and her subsequent arrival at the cape.

"That's funny," said the stranger. "I don't recollect reading about any young woman being lost at sea. But those big liners are always keeping such things under cover. Hoodoos the ship, they say, and turns prospective passengers to other lines. It hurts business. What's the young girl look like?"

Florence was described minutely. The stranger teetered in his chair and smoked. Finally he spoke.

"She probably was insane. That's the way generally with insane people. They can't see water or look off a tall building without wanting to jump. My business is insurance, and we've got the thing figured pretty close to the ground. They used to get the best of us on the suicide game. A man would take out a large policy today and tomorrow he'd blow his head off, and we'd have to pay his wife. But nowadays a policy is not worth the paper it's written on if a man commits suicide under two years."

"You ain't tryin' to insure anybody in town, are you?"

"Oh, no. No work for me when I'm on my vacation. Well, I'm going to bed; and tomorrow morning I'll go out to Captain Barnes' beach and have a good swim. I'm no sailor, but I like water."

He honestly enjoyed swimming. Early the next morning he was in the water, frolicking about as playfully as a boy. He had all the time in the world. Over his shoulder he saw two women wandering down toward the beach. Deeper he went, farther out. He was a bold swimmer, but that did not prevent a sudden and violent attack of cramps. And it was a rare piece of irony that the poor girl should save the life of that scoundrel who was without pity or mercy. As she saw his face a startled frown marred her brow. But she could not figure out the puzzle. Had she ever seen the man before? She did not know, she could not tell. Why could not she remember? Why must her poor head ache so when she tried to pierce the wall of darkness which surrounded her mentally?

The man thanked her feebly, but not in his heart. When he had sufficiently recovered he returned to the village and sought the railway station, where the Western Union had its office.

"I want to send a code message to my firm. Do you think you can follow it?"

"I can try," said the operator.

The code was really Slav; and when the long message was signed it was signed by the name Vroon.

The day after the news came that Florence had jumped overboard off the banks, Vroon with a dozen other men had started out to comb all the fishing villages along the New England coast. Somewhere along the way he felt confident that he would learn whether the girl was dead or alive. If she was dead then the game was a draw, but if she was alive there was still a fighting chance for the Black Hundred. He had had some idea of remaining in the village and accomplishing the work himself; but after deliberation he concluded that it was important enough for Braine himself to take a hand in. So the following night he departed for Boston, from there to New York. He proceeded at once to the apartment of the princess, where Braine declared that he himself would go to the obscure village and claim Florence as his own child. But to insure absolute success they would charter Morse's yacht and steam right up into the primitive harbor.

When Vroon left the apartment Norton saw him. He was a man of impulses, and he had found by experience that first impulses are generally the best. He did not know who Vroon was. Any man who called on the Princess Perigoff while Braine was with her would be worth following.

On the other hand, Vroon recognized the reporter instantly and with that ever-ready and alert mind of his set about to lure the young man into a trap out of which he might not easily come.

Norton decided to follow his man. He might be going on a wild-goose chase, he reasoned; still his first impulses had hitherto served him well. He looked careworn. He was convinced that Florence was dead, despite the assertions of Jones to the contrary. He had gone over all the mishaps which had taken place and he was now absolutely convinced that his whilom friend Braine and the Princess Perigoff were directly concerned. Florence had either been going to or coming from the apartment. And that memorable day of the abduction the princess had been in the dry goods shop.

Vroon took a downtown surface car, and Norton took the same. He sat huddled in a corner, never suspecting that Vroon was watching him from a corner of his eye. Norton was not keen today. The thought of Florence kept running through his head.

The car stopped and Vroon got off. He led Norton a winding course which at length ended at the door of a tenement building. Vroon entered. Norton paused, wondering what next to do, now that his man had reached his destination. Well, since he had followed him all this distance he must make an effort to find out who he was and what he was going to do. Cautiously he entered the hallway. As he was about to lay his hand on the newel post of the dilapidated stairs the floor dropped from under his feet and he was precipitated into the cellar.

This tenement belonged to the Black Hundred; it concealed a thousand doors and a hundred traps. Its history was as dark as its hallways.

When Vroon and his companion, who had been waiting for him, descended into the cellar they found the reporter insensible. They bound, blindfolded, and gagged him quickly.

"Saunders," said Vroon, "you tell Corrigan that I've a sailor for him to-night, and that I want this sailor booked for somewhere south of the equator. Tell him to say to the master that this fellow is ugly and disobedient. A tramp freighter, whose captain is a bully. Do you understand me?"

"I get you. But there's no need to go to Corrigan this trip. Bannock is in port and sails tonight for Norway. That's far enough."

"Bannock? The very man. Well, Mr. Norton, reporter and amateur detective, I guess we've got you fast enough this time. You may or may not come back alive. Go and bring around a taxi; some one you can trust. I'll dope the reporter while you're gone."

Long hours afterward Norton opened his aching eyes. He could hardly move and his head buzzed abominably. What had happened? What was the meaning of this slow rise and fall of his bed? Shangaied?

"Come out o' that now, ye skulker!" roared a voice down the companionway.

"Shangaied!" the reporter murmured. He sat up and ran through his pockets. Not a sou-markee, not a match even; and a second glance told him that the clothes he wore were not his own. "They've landed me this time. Shangaied! What the devil am I going to do?"

"Dye hear me?" bawled the strident voice again.

Norton looked about desperately for some weapon of defense. He saw an engineer's spanner on the floor by the bunk across the way, and with no small physical effort he succeeded in obtaining it. He stood up, his hand behind his back.

"All right, me bucko! I'll come down an' git ye!"

A pair of enormous boots began to appear down the companionway, and there gradually rose up from them a man as wide as a church door and as deep as a well.

"Wait a moment," said Norton, gripping the spanner. "Let us have a perfect understanding right off the bat."

"We're going t' have it, matey. Don't ye worry none."

Norton raised the spanner, and, dizzy as he was, faced this seafaring Hercules courageously.

"I've been shangaied, and you know it. Where are we bound?"

"Copenhagen."

"Well, for a month or more you'll beat me up whenever the opportunity offers. But I merely wish to warn you that if you do you'll find a heap of trouble waiting for you the next time you drop your mudhook in North America."

"Is that so?" said the giant, eying the spanner and the shaking hand that held it aloft.

"It is. I'll take your orders and do the best I can, because you've got the upper hand. But, God is witness, you'll pay for every needless blow you strike. Now what do you want me to do?"

"Lay down that spanner an' come on deck, I'll tell ye what t' do. I was goin' t' whale th' daylight out o' ye; I t' ye somethin' av a man. Drop the spanner first."

Norton hesitated. As lithe as a tiger the bulk of a man sprang at him and crushed him to the floor, wrenching away the spanner. Then the giant took Norton by the scruff of his neck and banged him up the steps to the deck.

"I ain't goin' t' hurt ye. I hac' t' show ye that no spanner ever bothered Mike Bannock. Now, d' know what a cook's galley is?"

"I do," said Norton, breathing hard. "Well, like there an' start in with peelin' spuds, an' don't waste 'em neither. That'll be all fer th' present. Ye were due for a wallopin' but I kinda like yer spunk."

So Jim stumbled down to the cook's galley and grimly set to work at the potatoes. It might have been far worse. But here he was, likely to be on the high seas for months, and no way of notifying Jones what had happened. The outlook was anything but cheerful. But a vague hope awoke in his heart. If they were still after him might it not signify that Florence lived?

Meantime Braine had not been idle. According to Vroon the girl's memory was in bad shape; so he had not the least doubt of bringing her back to New York without mishap. Once he had her here the game would begin in earnest. He played his cards exceedingly well. Steaming up into the little fishing harbor with a handsome yacht in itself would allay any distrust. And he wore a capital disguise, too. Everything went well till he laid his hand on Florence's shoulder. She gave a startled cry and ran over to Barnes, clinging to him wildly.

"No, no!" she cried.

"Now what, my child?" asked the sailor.

She shook her head. Her aversion was inexplicable.

"Come, my dear; can't you see that it is your father?" Braine turned to the captain. "She has been like this for a year. Heaven knows if she'll ever be in her right mind again," sadly. "I was giving her an ocean voyage, with the kindest nurses possible, and yet she jumped overboard. Come, Florence."

The girl wrapped her arms all the tighter around Barnes' neck.

An idea came into the old sailor's head. "Of course, sir, y've got proof that she's your daughter?"

"Proof?" Braine was taken aback. "Yes; somethin' t' prove that you're her father. I got skinned out of a sloop once because I took a man's word at its face value. Black an' white, an' on paper, says I, hereafter."

"But I never thought of such a thing," protested Braine, beginning to lose his patience. "I can't risk sending to New York for documents. She is my daughter, and you will find it will not pay to take this peculiar stand."

"In black an' white, 'r y' can't have her."

Braine thereupon rushed forward to seize Florence. Barnes swung Florence behind him.

"I guess she'll stay here a leetle longer, sir."

Time was vital, and this obstinacy made Braine furious. He reached again for Florence.

"Clear out o' here, 'r show your authority," growled Barnes.

"She goes with me, or you'll regret it."

"All right. But I guess th' law won't hurt me none. I'm in my rights. There's the door, mister."

"I refuse to go without her!"

Barnes sighed. He was on land a man of peace, but there was a limit to his patience. He seized Braine by the shoulders and hustled him out of the house.

"Bring your proofs, mister, an' nothin' more'll be said; but till y' bring 'em, keep away from this cottage."

And, simple-minded sailor that he was, he thought this settled the matter.

That night he kept his ears open for unusual sounds, but he merely wasted his night's rest. Quite naturally, he reckoned that the stranger would make his attempt at night. Indeed, he made it in broad daylight, with Barnes not a hundred yards away, calking a dory whose seams had sprung aleak. Braine had Florence upon the chartered yacht before the old man realized what had happened. He never saw Florence again; but one day, months later, he read all about her in a newspaper.

Florence fought; but she was weak, and so the conquest was easy. Braine was kind enough, now that he had her safe. He talked to her, but she merely stared at the receding coast.

"All right; don't talk if you don't want to. Here," to one of the men, "take her to the cabin and keep her there. But don't you touch her. I'll break you if you do. Put her in the cabin and guard the door; at least keep an eye on it. She may take it into her head to jump overboard."

Even the temporarily demented are not without a species of cunning. Florence had never seen Braine till she revolted at the touch of his hand. On the second day out toward New York she found a box of matches and blithely set fire to her cabin, walked out into the corridor and thence to the deck. When the fire was discovered it had gained too much headway to be stopped. The yacht was doomed. They put off in the boats and for half a day drifted helplessly.

Fate has everything mapped out like a game of chess. You move a pawn, and bang goes your bishop, or your knight, or your king; or she lets you almost win a game, and then checkmates you. But there is one thing to be said in her favor—rail at her how we will, she is always giving odds to the innocent.

Mike Bannock was in the pilothouse, looking over his charts, when the lookout in the crow's nest sang out: "Two boats adrift off the port bow, sir!" And Bannock, who was a first-class sailor, although a rough one, shouted down the tube to the engine room. The freighter came to a halt in about ten minutes. The castaways saw that they had been noted, and pulled gallantly at the oars.

There are some things which science, well advanced as it is, cannot explain. Among them is the shock which cuts off the past and the counter shock which reawakens memory. They may write treatise after treatise and expound, but they never succeed

"Girl, I Love You Better Than Life."

In truly getting beyond that dark wall of mystery.

At the sound of Jim Norton's voice and at the sight of his face—for subconsciously she must have been thinking of him all the while—a great blinding heat-wave seemed to burn across her eyes, and when the effect passed away she was herself again. A wild glance at her surroundings convinced her that both she and her lover were in danger.

"Keep back," whispered Jim. "Don't recognize me."

"They believe that I've lost my mind, and I'll keep that idea in their heads. Sometime tonight I'll find a chance to talk to you."

It took a good deal of cautious maneuvering to bring about the meeting.

"They shanghaied me. And I thought you dead! It was all wrong. It was a trick of that Perigoff woman, and it succeeded. Girl, girl, I love you better than life!"

"I know it now," she said, and she kissed him. "Has my father appeared yet?"

"No."

"Do you know anything at all about him?" sadly.

"I thought I did. It's all a jumble to me. But beware of the man who brought you here. He is the head of all our troubles; and if he knew I was on board he'd kill me out of hand. He'd have to."

Braine offered Bannock $1,000 to turn back as far as Boston; and as Bannock had all the time in the world, carrying no perishable goods, he consented. But he never could quite understand what followed. He had put Florence and Braine in the boat and landed them; but when he went down to see if Braine had left anything behind, he found that individual bound and gagged in his bunk.

ALFALFA A SOIL BUILDER.

Red clover is an excellent soil improver and should continue to be used for this purpose, but a ton of alfalfa contains seven pounds of nitrogen and one pound of phosphoric acid more than the same amount of clover. The total manure produced as a by-product in feeding a ton of alfalfa hay is relatively more valuable than the total manure produced in feeding the same amount of clover hay, because richer in nitrogen.

Alfalfa has a deeper and heavier root system than clover and is more efficient in adding vegetable matter of a high nitrogen content to the soil. The deeper root system makes alfalfa more efficient than red clover in using the mineral matter contained in the subsoil and improving drainage.

Looking toward the future with respect both to producing a higher yield of a more valuable forage per acre and to maintaining the productivity of the soil, it is a matter of wisdom to raise more acres of clover and alfalfa and fewer acres of timothy.—Minnesota Farmers' Library.

Cloverport Citizens Cannot Doubt It.

Scientific Farming

OATS FOR WINTER STOCK.

Besides Being an Excellent Feed They Possess Other Advantages.

For the farmer in the cotton belt there is no better feed than fall sown oats, writes Louis Colon in the Farm Progress. While corn is being grown on greater acreages than at any time in the past over most of the cotton area oats sown in the fall should be one of our main reliances for stock wintering.

While their feeding value is the first consideration to the man who is growing stock, fall sown oats have many other advantages. They serve as a winter cover crop, as a restorer of humus to the soils, and when permitted to mature they furnish a fairly satisfactory cash crop.

I find the fall sown oats most valuable as a winter grazing crop. They may be sown at varying periods in the fall, usually from Oct. 1 to the latter part of November, the date of the sowing depending upon the latitude. I have pastured live stock on oats from the last of October to the first of January, and in some sections they are pastured all winter.

They do better when sown after corn or cowpeas. The ground is easy to get into good fix following either of these crops, and not a great deal of work is necessary. A disk can be used to cut up the cornstalks or the pea vines and for giving the ground as much stirring as is needed for oat sowing. By disk-ing and double disking, harrowing and cross harrowing, the soil can be put in perfect condition without having to break the ground.

Where the ground is packed firmly it will have to be broken again, plowing deeply and following this with the disk and the harrow. Late cultivated cornfields should be loose enough without breaking, but pea ground is likely to be too firm to disk up properly without plowing it first. The soil should be stirred and broken up as finely as possible.

While broadcasted oats do very well, it is always better to drill them where this is possible. In the first place the drill does not require nearly as much seed to uniformly sow an acre of oats. The seed, too, are covered at uniform depth and will come up evenly, grow evenly and ripen evenly if the crop is permitted to reach maturity. It has been my experience that drilled oats yield better than those sown broadcast.

In my opinion the principal value of the winter oats is in a corn or cotton and legume rotation. You see, the oats may be sown in the fall and pastured or allowed to mature early in the season. When they mature they can be cut, shocked and hauled out of the way in plenty of time to have them followed by soy beans, velvet beans or cowpeas. Whether you cut the legume and use it as a feed or plow it under as a green manure crop does not matter much, as you are returning fertility to the land either way. The legume that fall may be followed by more oats. They may be pastured and turned under as a green manure crop before putting the field in either corn or cotton.

HARD ROAD TO SLED

Sherman Law Is Obstruction Policy Says Lawyer.

New York (Special): Attorney Jas. N. Beck declared the Sherman law prevented "combination where combination was absolutely necessary," after he had entered pleas of nolo contendere for seven of his clients who were defendants in the government prosecution of the Eastern Boxboard club, before Judge Neterer in the United States district court.

In the case of the Eastern Boxboard club, Mr. Beck said the statute had interfered with the advancement of the humanitarian project of reducing the working days of the hands in the paper board mills from seven to six days. "For the past ten years," said Mr. Beck, "the business men of this country have had a hard road to sled, what with the civil and criminal possibilities of the Sherman law and the uncertainty of the supreme court itself, as to the interpretation of the law."

Assistant United States Attorney Claude A. Thompson declared that the object of the club was to restrain trade and fix arbitrary prices. He admitted, however, that the prices fixed were not exorbitant.

How Canada Got Its Name.

The origin of the name Canada is strange enough. The Spaniards visited that country previous to the French and made particular search for gold and silver, and, finding none, they often said among themselves, "Aca nada," meaning "There is nothing here." The Indians, who watched closely, learned this sentence and its meaning. Later on the French arrived, and the Indians, who wanted none of their company and supposed they had come on the same errand as the Spaniards, were desirous to inform them in the Spanish sentence "Aca nada." The French, who knew as little of the Spanish language as they, supposed that the incessantly recurring sound was the name of the country and ultimately christened it Canada, which it has borne ever since.

UNSOLVED MYSTERIES.

Such as Radium, the Human Brain and the Electric Fluid.

Alexander Graham Bell was once asked if he understood precisely how a telephone conveyed the sound of a human voice. His answer was: "No. I only know what is done. I do not know how it is accomplished."

One is reminded of Lord Kelvin's remark to some of his professional colleagues near the close of his brilliant career. It will be recalled that Bell gave to Kelvin the instruments used in the first demonstration of telephony at the Philadelphia Centennial in 1876. It was many years later that Kelvin said that he knew no more as to the nature of electricity than he knew when he first began to work with it.

From Franklin to Edison master minds among us have done wonderful things with cells and dynamos, generators and transformers, directing the interplay of dreadful elemental forces as inscrutable as they are majestic. And still we do not know what electricity is.

A woman finds that tons and tons of a certain ore produce a fraction of a gram of radium, and we go to work with it and behold the portentous results it achieves, but we do not know what it is.

A congregation of sapient alienists at a trial gives expert testimony, but no man among them knows what his own brain is nor how it gives instantaneous directions to the foot and the hand. Mystery is at the very root of life and rules it to the end. Whatever way we turn we find the abyss unplumbed, the unfathomed darkness. How ridiculous is our presumption of knowledge before so vast an ignorance!—Philadelphia Ledger.

SHOES SPOIL OUR FEET.

That is Why So Few Persons Have Perfect Pedal Extremities.

A person with normal feet is very difficult to find. In fact, the doctors inform us that foot trouble is endemic in the United States, as well as in every enlightened country on the globe. The cause of this condition and the vast suffering which it entails is the unhygienic shoe.

A thousand Porto Ricans whose feet had never been shod were examined. Not a single diseased or deformed foot was found among them. A San Francisco surgeon, in commenting on this fact, declares that among a thousand shoe wearing Americans there is hardly one with normal feet.

The trouble is that the vast majority of our shoes are improperly constructed. The fashionable shoe seems built to force the foot into shapes which, however slightly, are nevertheless abnormal. That worn by the masses is equally inimical to foot health, for the reason that it is constructed with very little reference to the lines of the foot and without effort to adjust it to the normal movements of that member.

The medical man presents the moccasin as the most wholesome foot covering yet devised, but very few are sanguine enough to hope that fashion will permit its general use. Next to the moccasin, so we are told, is the shoe that not only permits the foot to perform its normal functions unimpeded, but strengthens it when in use. This is the shoe that, instead of pinching the foot or forcing it into abnormal shapes or positions, actually fits it.—Boston Herald.

Submarine Mines.

Wet gun cotton in submarine mines is, of course, a very potent explosive, but in many respects it is quite outclassed by the compound used in German mines and known as trinitrotoluene, but abbreviated to "T. N. T." in Great Britain and to "trouty" in Germany. A shell, torpedo or mine loaded with "T. N. T." (which requires to be detonated by means of mercury fulminate) bursts with great violence into large fragments, whereas if loaded with picric acid the splinters are very small and cannot therefore do as much damage. Although wet gun cotton is more powerful if exploded in close proximity to the target, the effect of "T. N. T." is much greater when the explosion takes place some distance away.—London Telegraph.

The Steamer Duck.

Around the southern extremity of South America is to be found a very large duck, which bears the common name of "steamer duck" or "race horse," owing to a peculiar habit it has of rowing itself along the surface of the water at great speed. This is said to be due to the remarkable fact that the bird loses its power of flight when it reaches maturity. These ducks are very common.—Chicago Herald.

FIRE EATERS.

The Trick of Breathing Flames and Sparks From the Mouth.

The first known fire breather was a Syrian slave named Eunus, a leader in the Servile war in Sicily, 130 B. C. He pretended to have immediate communication with the gods. When desirous of inspiring his followers with courage he breathed flames and sparks from his mouth.

In order to accomplish this feat Eunus pierced a nutshell at both ends, and, having filled it with some burning substance, he put it in his mouth and breathed through it. The same trick is performed today in a more approved manner. The performer rolls some flax or hemp into a ball about the size of a walnut, which he lets burn until it is nearly consumed. Then he rolls around it more flax while it is still burning. By this means the fire is retained in the ball for a long time. He slips this ball into his mouth unperceived and breathes through it. His breath revives the fire, and he sustains no injury so long as he inhales only through his nostrils.

Various theories have been advanced to account for other feats of this sort performed by the ancients. An old ordeal was the holding of a red-hot iron by the accused, who was not burned if he were innocent. Probably some protective paste was used on the hands. The peculiar property of mineral salts, such as alum, in protecting articles of dress from fire has long been known. An old Milanese devised a costume consisting of a cloth covering for the body which had been steeped in alum. A metallic dress of wire gauze was added to this, and thus protected a man might walk on hot iron.

AMERICAN SHIP IS SUNK BY MINE

Probably In Charge of German Pilot at Time.

CAPTAIN AND CREW ARE SAFE

Vessel Was Bound For Bremen With Cotton and Hit Stray Mine In Belligerent Waters—Germany Not Held Seriously to Blame.

Washington, Feb. 22.—Corroborative reports of the destruction of the American steamer Evelyn, off the German coast, presumably by a mine, was received by Secretary of State Bryan. Consul W. T. Fee, at Bremen, Germany, to which the Evelyn was bound with a cargo of cotton, sent the following dispatch to the state department: "Steamer Evelyn, Captain Smith, agents Bull & Co., New York, bound up early Friday at Borkum. Crew saved. Ship and cargo lost."

Secretary Bryan had the message repeated to the American embassies at London and Berlin with instructions that every possible care be taken of the crew and to ascertain and report to Washington all facts obtainable in the case.

That no serious blame can be attached to the German government for this, the first disaster to an American ship, was the conclusion reached, based upon Consul Fee's dispatch. Borkum is one of a chain of islands southwest of the mouth of the Weser river, on which is the port of Bremen. The harbors of all the belligerents are understood to have been mined, and the maritime world had been informed under what conditions the ports of these countries may be entered by merchant vessels. Only in case shipping has not been notified that a harbor has been mined by the government controlling it can the government which laid the mines be held responsible for disaster to shipping as a result of these mines. The German government has issued many announcements of rules and regulations for entering German mined harbors since the war began.

The Evelyn was last reported off Beachy Head on Feb. 15 and should have reached the position off Borkum island, where she was sunk, not more than two days later.

She put in at Rotterdam and then proceeded up the Dutch coast toward the mouth of the Weser, on which river the city of Bremen is located. Inasmuch as the Germans must have wanted the cargo of cotton badly, it is presumed that she had a pilot aboard at the time she was struck, to guide her through the mine fields. At least that is the view of her owners, and it is supposed that if she was sunk by a mine it must have been one that had broken loose, a danger against which the skill of the pilot could not prevail.

MEDICAL RESEARCH IN WAR HOSPITALS

Miss Lilly to Join Dr. Carrel in Work.

New York (Special): Miss Katherine Lilly will sail on the Rochambeau. She is the head nurse of the department of surgery of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research. She goes with a detachment of nurses being sent by the American Red Cross.

Miss Lilly is going to France for the special purpose of assisting Dr. Alexis Carrel of the institute. Dr. Carrel now has been detached from work at the Lyons hospital and placed by the French government in charge of a hospital at Compeigne.

In order that the work may not only be of the greatest effectiveness at the moment, but may be made permanent, available to the world of science, the Rockefeller Institute is equipping Dr. Carrel's hospital with complete apparatus for research in the bacteriological, pathological, chemical and surgical conditions which may arise.

For the use of the patients in charge of Dr. Carrel and his assistants the government has requisitioned a hotel for hospital purposes with accommodations for about 100 persons. The government will provide administrative officers as well as competent surgeons suggested by Dr. Carrel, to carry on the regular work, thus leaving Dr. Carrel free to perform his characteristic operations, especially in the line of transplanting tissues, blood vessels and nerves, and blood transfusion, and to conduct the laboratory studies which are about to be undertaken.

STATE BORROWS $400,000

Will Use Money to Meet Expenses Until Taxes Come In.

Indianapolis (Special): The state of Indiana, through the state board of finance, negotiated a loan of $400,000 to be used in meeting the expenses of the state until the county treasurers make their next semi-annual settlement of taxes.

The fact that the state must pay out something like $100,000 to reimburse stock dealers of the state whose cattle and swine were slaughtered in the effort to stop the spread of the foot and mouth disease is given as the reason for the state borrowing money once more. Another reason was the state's investment of $80,000 in seiseil, the raw material used at the state prison in the manufacture of binding twine, which will be returned with a profit when the twine is sold.

A GENERAL SURVEY OF THE WAR

A dispatch from Belgrade announces that the Austrians have again begun the bombardment of that city.

Demonstrations in favor of Italian intervention on the side of the allies took place in Rome, but the police were prepared and the affair passed off without serious trouble.

Russian and German claims regarding the fighting in East Prussia still conflict. Germany asserts that the Russians were defeated and narrowly escaped annihilation. Russia admits being obliged to retire, but declares that her armies are intact.

It is reported that a dispatch has been received conveying information that a British transport bringing troops to France, was sunk in the English channel. The news has been posted at the newspaper offices and has caused great rejoicing in the capital.

A message from Innsbruck says that Austria is preparing to emulate Germany by torpedoing merchant ships in the Adriatic, and is only awaiting decisive orders from Berlin. It is reported that the two emperors will confer shortly near the frontier.

A dispatch from Petrograd says that the effort of the Germans to annihilate the Russians in East Prussia has been definitely foiled and that Russian reinforcements are now taking the offensive in northern Poland.

The French war office announces the capture of an entire line of German trenches north of Perthes, in Champagne, and the repulse of attacks which the Germans have delivered on the heights of the Meuse.

Large Building Is Moved Eight Miles Over Water.

An unusual piece of house moving was recently accomplished at Cleveland, Ohio, when a three-and-a-half-story building, occupied by a yacht club, was blocked up on barges and towed eight miles over Lake Erie to a new site on an island in Rocky River. The structure is 52 by 78 ft. in size, and placed an aggregate weight on the three scows which were employed of approximately 310 tons. The largest of the barges, 40 ft. wide and 120 ft. in length, was lashed in the middle and supported 80 per cent of the load. A picture of the building during its removal is a feature of the March Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Correction.

Dear Mr. Babbage: Please correct in your next issue of The Breckenridge News my mistake of last week. Mrs. Joe Wilson, of Cannelton, is not a sister of the late Thomas Goatley. He only has the two sisters living, Miss Nann Goatley and Mrs. Tene Schroeder, both of Boyd, Ind., and two brothers, Mr. James Goatley, of Boyd, and Mr. Ike Goatley, of Great Bend, Kansas.

And oblige,
MRS. T. GOATLEY.

Persons writing, should always sign name. Also give three facts in your items, name, time and place. "Miss Susie Jones called on Mr. Tom Smith" is not news, 'tis only gossip. The Breckenridge News wants news and always glad to receive it from subscribers.

It varies in height and dimensions according to climate and soil and invariably maintains its drooping habit, the chief cause of its attractiveness.—New York American.
